Each of the three pavilions is 250 square feet.

RUTHERFORD

Made in the Shade

The latest at Quintessa winery: a series of hidden tasting pavilions overlooking everything from oak-dotted woodlands to a sparkling lake. Designed by San Francisco-based Walker Warner Architects—who also masterminded the winery—each angular, open-air structure is supported by steel beams and polished concrete, naturally softened with lighter wood furnishings and terraced into the ridgeline. Don't call them follies, though—they have a purpose. Look for special barrel tastings of the vineyards' 26 blocks alongside a cheese pairing. It's a minimum of four guests, but when it comes to wine, the more, the merrier. $125/person; quintessa.com.

STAKEHOLDER

Edyn self-irrigates, tracks soil moisture and tells you when your squash is ready to harvest. Are you surprised to know that Yves Béhar/Fuseproject is behind this garden genie? edyn.com.

SAUSALITO
Watershed Moment

With their countercultural history, Sausalito's floating homes are art on water, from Jean Yanko Varda and philosopher Alan Watts' SS Vallejo, to Bill Harlan and his mini floating "Taj Mahal." Today's owners do not disappoint, and the annual Floating Homes House Tour offers a rare opportunity to peek inside modern maritime design. Sept. 20; floatinghomes.org.

SAN FRANCISCO

FLOORED

From recycling bath porcelain to crafting glass pieces from crushed TV monitors, Fireclay Tile has revolutionized the sustainable tile industry since 1986. With a recent rebirth, this year alone, the San Jose company has opened both a S.F. showroom as well as launched three new hand-painted collections of geometrics and time-honored motifs. 901 Brannan St., S.F., 415-697-2044; fireclaytile.com.
